Why Do Our Sponsors Return Year After Year?

Highly Targeted. Unlike other larger HR conferences that attract not only recruiters and diversity specialists but also Labor Relations/Benefits/Work Life/HRIS professionals, this event targets a defined audience – those who are responsible for the military recruiting programs at their companies. They are expressing, through their interest in the event and their paid attendance, that they are serious about improving their recruitment and retention of veterans and veterans with disabilities. Sponsoring or exhibiting at this event puts your organization front and center in their minds as they search for resources that will assist them in their efforts.

Small Conference Size. Given the defined target audience, the conference size (less than 400 participants) ensures maximum contact time with attendees.

Multiple Contact Opportunities. Sponsorship and exhibition is designed to drive attendees to you. Meals and coffee breaks are in the expo area. Each break is sufficiently timed to offer maximum opportunity to meet and mingle with the attendees. Several sponsor levels provide you extra exposure through session presentation opportunities or short introductions of your company/product/service.

About The Event

The Veteran Recruiting Conference is an annual conference specifically for large (1,000+ US employees) companies that are seeking information, advice and resources to help them improve recruitment and retention of military veterans. 2019 will be our 7th annual event and we expect 150 - 200 attendees from large companies. Fortune 500 companies like CVS, Northrop Grumman and Wells Fargo are just a few of the organizations who make this a “must attend” event every year.

The companies range from those with mature veteran programs (4+ years) to those just starting to build a program. Unlike events that are free for employers to attend, this conference draws companies that are demonstrating a willingness to invest time, people and capital to gain access to this information and these resources. And, unlike larger HR-related conferences, every attendee of this event is interested in one thing – how to improve recruitment and retention of veterans.

If your company has a need to directly engage with this audience, you cannot ask for an event that provides more face-to-face opportunities.

About The Value Of a Veteran

Founded in 2007, The Value Of a Veteran is a human resources training and consulting firm that specializes in educating employers on how to recruit and retain veterans.

It was the first company to create commercially available comprehensive training expressly for employers, human resources professionals and hiring managers that covered all aspects of veteran recruitment and retention.

Its content is the only one available that was developed by someone with both significant military experience AND staffing/recruiting experience, making it both relevant and realistically actionable for recruiters and managers to implement.

In its most recent 3 years (2015-2017) The Value Of a Veteran has been directly engaged with the military recruiting programs of more than 150 large companies (5,000+ employees). The Value Of a Veteran has worked with more than 360 Fortune-1000 size companies since its founding in 2007.
